RAIL PEACE AT CROSS ROADS WITH LEADERS OF SHOPMEN DEADLOCKED ON SEPARATE AGREEMENTS; INJUNCTION HEARING ON

While Contending Factions Among The Strikers
Appear To Be Getting Further Apart Government Goes Ahead To Place Responsibility For
Wrecks And Disorder On Men.

PEACE IS STILL FURTHER AWAY TODAY

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Rail peace stood at the cross-roads today with the leaders of the shop unions deadlocked.

One faction, led by Bert M. Jewell, president of the shop crafts, was voicing approval of separate agreements with railroads willing to compromise.

Another, including, it is reported, more than half of the 90 general chairmen who form the policy committee, stood out firmly for no settlement.

Early in the day Jewell and other leaders prophesied an early settlement. As the sessions wore on general opposition to separate agreements crystallized into formidable opposition to the leaders and at adjournment it was stated "no definite action has been taken."

Hearing Continues. While strike leaders were trying to work their way out of their immediate problem, the Government was trying to prove that they are guilty of a general conspiracy against the railroads in an equally hot session before Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The court put the onus of proof that the strike leaders have been responsible for murders, wrecks, disastrous transportation holdups, and

COAL TRAIN WRECK ON B. R. & P. ROAD BLOCKS TRAFFIC

A broken flange was the cause of a freight wreck on the B. R. & P. road yesterday afternoon, which piled up five cars in the cut above the W. Market street station and caused all trains on that road to transfer at Curwensville and come into Clearfield on the Pennsylvania.

Two cars of coal were upset completely blocking the cut and the other three cars to leave the rails piled up on this mass and made an afternoon and evening job for the wrecking crew.

The operation attracted a large crowd of the curious who stayed on the job until the track was cleared.

BOOTLEGGERS FALL OUT; ONLY ONE IS KILLED IN SCRAP

New York, N. Y. Sept. 13.—A clash of bootlegging clans caused one life and probably two others early today in a gun battle in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn. Leon Diamond, aged 14, a messenger boy, who strayed into the battle zone as the revolvers began spitting fire and lead was struck by a stray bullet. Two alleged smugglers were taken to a hospital shortly afterwards suffering from probably mortal wounds. Members of the opposing factions met at a neutral corner shortly after midnight lining up in doorways on either side of the intersecting streets and opening fire. The police arrived in time to arrest one alleged member of the gang and found the body of the slain messenger boy.

OPERATED UPON FOR APPENDICITIS

Just as he was about ready to leave for Georgetown Prep School at Washington, James Watery orth, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. S. J. Watery, was taken down with acute appendicitis and taken to Clearfield Hospital where an immediate operation was performed last evening.

The young man rallied nicely following the operation and his condition is highly satisfactory at this time.

PENN STATE OPENS WITH 3,300 PUPILS ON BOOKS FOR 1922

Pres. Thomas Welcomes
Largest Body Of Students
In The College's
History Today.

1,000 NEW FACES

State College, Pa., Sept. 13.—The college auditorium was entirely inadequate to care for the more than 3,000 students who were on hand this morning when the Pennsylvania State College opened its doors for its 68th year. A third of the men and women were members of the incoming Freshman class, many of whom were unable to get inside the doors of the building for the opening exercises. President John M. Thomas welcomed the new students to Penn State and said in part:

"There is a very challenging expression the American language has acquired in recent years—'It's up to you.' With that challenge Penn State greets you.

"There are glorious opportunities here—opportunities for culture and development of strong manhood, for professional attainment, for rewarding friendships, for great service to your fellow students and to the college, for distinction in the world of college men. We are glad to welcome each one of you, and we will all try to help you in our own way—the faculty in their way, your fellow-students in theirs.

"But we cannot make good for you; you must make good for yourself. It will take grit, patience, hard work, common sense, and every manly quality you possess. But the end is worth the struggle, for real success in college almost inevitably means success in after life. We wish you well—but it's up to you."

During the past two days the gigantic task of enrolling the 1,000 new students and of arranging schedules for those of the upper classes has been going on from morning to night, and although the bulk of the registering closed with the opening of college this morning, late arrivals will still keep the office of the registrar in action for the balance of the week. It is estimated by Professor A. H. Espenshade, college registrar, that there will be 3,300 men and women enrolled at Penn State this fall—the largest number in the history of the institution. The annual Y. M. C. A. reception to the new students will be held on the front campus on Friday evening of this week.

JEALOUS OLD GIRLS DOWN IN TEXAS ALSO FORM KU KLUX KLAN

Fort Worth Texas Sept. 13.—The Ladies of the Invisible Eye entered here southwest as an organization of terror last night. Mrs. I. C. Tatum, aged 45 was spirited from her home during the night and severely flogged by the "ladies," according to official reports. She is in a serious condition today from one hundred lashes from a quirt which were administered by a committee from the "Ladies of the Invisible Eye." County authorities in church women had requested Mrs. Tatum to surrender to the courts on the ground that she was receiving improper attentions. Mrs. Tatum told officers she was called from her home on the pretext that her daughter was ill and wished her to come. When she found the automobile in which she was being abducted was going in the opposite direction from where her daughter was she attempted to jump but was restrained by a male companion of the "ladies."

The Clearfield Schools both public and parochial, opened on Wednesday last with the largest attendance in their history. The combined total of the school children of the community as shown by the enrollment of the different schools shows 2,343 pupils.

The above is a remarkable showing and speaks volumes for the interest Clearfield people take in education. In addition to the total scholars enrolled the High School authorities were forced to refuse admission because of lack of room, to no less than forty out of town or tuition pupils who sought to enter.

The enrollment on opening day in the public schools was 98 per cent of the expectancy. This army of nearly 2100 pupils is being looked after and instructed by a corps of 63 teachers which total includes the High School Principal and City Superintendent Zerfos.

FARM BLOC ON JOB

Washington, D. C. Sept. 13.—With debate limited the House today tackled the conference report on the Tariff Act of 1922, with every assurance that the bill would be passed and rushed to the Senate before night. The bill was reported yesterday. Only four hours debate was to be allowed on the tariff. Although the wool, copper and sugar duties had bitter opposition the chief attack was on the dye embargo reinserted by the committee and the 1-2c rate on potash. The Farm Bloc was organized to battle for a reduction on potash, their aim being to force this article on the free list.

Couldn't Be Hooked If She Never Gave Note For Hook Company Stock Said Jury

The third week of September term of criminal court opened on Monday with Judge Bell presiding. The list for trial contained several cases of minor importance.

The first case called for trial was that of the Adjustable Gambrel Hook Co. vs. Mrs. Elvora Kuzman. This was a suit to recover $200, the amount of a note Mrs. Kuzman was alleged to have given Morris Skinner of DuBois, an agent of the company, for several shares of stock in the hook company.

Following this alleged transaction, the note was sold to Mrs. Maggie Shill of Punxsutawney, who, when she attempted to realize on same, found that she had got the "hook" when she made the alleged purchase of the note, as Mrs. Kuzman refused to be "hooked" by disclaiming ever having given Skinner any note.

The note was produced in evidence and bore the name of Mrs. Kuzman, and as she was unable to write the name had been written by another hand and carried what was alleged to be her mark, which she positively denied. Skinner testified the woman thought otherwise and returned a verdict for Mrs. Kuzman.

The plaintiff was represented by L. D. McCall, Esq., while John C. Arnold, Esq., conducted the defense for Mrs. Kuzman.

TWO CARS ARE VERY BADLY DAMAGED

Sam Fama, the little 8 year old fellow and knocked him down along side the curb away from the wheels and this undoubtedly saved him from more serious injury. Mr. Knepp stopped his car almost immediately and picking the boy up, placed him in his car and hurried him to the Clearfield Hospital where Dr. Waterworth examined him and found that beyond a slight cut in the head and a general shaking up he was unharmed. He will be kept in the hospital for 24 hours however for observation although he is reported as lively as a cricket this afternoon.

The accident occurred at the corner of Eighth and Daisy streets. Knepp was driving down Daisy street. A car was parked on the street close to the corner and the boy in attempting to cross the street stepped out from behind the parked car directly in front of Knepp's car.

When the boy stepped in front of the car he was too close for the driver to avoid striking him. As soon as he saw the lad Knepp swerved his car to the right but was upon the boy before he could jump back out of harm's way. The left fender struck the little

CLEARFIELD BOY AN ACTOR IN PATHETIC EPISODE ENACTED AT WILLIAMSPORT; GOLD STAR MOTHER MEETS SON'S BUDDIE

The following article is taken from the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin of Tuesday, Sept. 12th:—Thousands of white crosses in a cemetery in France mark the graves of thousands of American soldiers. One of these plain white crosses bears the inscription: "Corporal Clifford Russell, Company C, Fifth Regiment, U. S. Marines."

Thousands of soldiers gathered in Williamsport last week for the State convention of the American Legion. Thousands of relatives of soldiers gathered here also for the convention of the Auxiliary of the American Legion, among whom were a score or more of Gold Star mothers.

Mother Attending Convention. One of these Gold Star mothers was the mother of Corporal Russell, who is sleeping the eternal sleep in that cemetery in France. She knew that her son had died fighting for his country. She knew that he was sleeping "over there" with a plain white cross marking his grave. She knew that his country and grateful France would forever preserve his grave.

She knew he had died fighting; died a brave death and she was proud of her son for that. But perchance one of his buddies was here in Williamsport among the thousands of soldiers, Legionnaires, come to their State convention. Perchance one of them had seen him fall, had heard his last words—his last words, a message to his mother. Who knows? Longed For Story. Her mother's heart was aching to hear the story of his glorious death. (Continued on Page 2).

Many children have died of starvation since the Turkish occupation and many others are in dire need of food. Mustafa Kemal, leader of the Turks has evidently been able to hold his troops in check, making them refrain from attacks on the christians.

said to view separate settlements as a complete backdown by the shop unions and a step that will crush the organizations.

Jewell and his adherents are favoring a separate agreement with the Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, Southern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and a number of other roads on the basis, it is reported, of full seniority, working conditions as of June 30, and wages on the present basis pending future conferences. This, the Jewell faction is said to hold, would give the unions a wedge into the executive association ranks.

That the feeling is tense and the fight a hard one was evident as members of the committee, their hair rumpled and their collars wilted, came from the executive sessions.

"It is make or break and it isn't going to be break," said one member, opposed to separate agreements.

The shop leaders were said to be in constant touch by telegraph and telephone with the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City and the "Big Four" Brotherhoods at Cleveland.

CLEARFIELD BOY

She could picture him crumpling to the ground after a Hun bullet had found lodgment in his flesh. Oh, it would be a comfort to have some one tell her the story; the story of that fierce onslaught of the Americans in Belleau Wood and of her son's part in it. Some one to tell her of the tense moments before the zero hour when the men in the dark green of the Marines went over the top. Some one to tell her of what her son said and what he did before the charge; when he fell and did he send a message to his mother by one of his buddies, a message that had never been received. Her mother heart was aching to hear that story.

Accosted First Marine.

A soldier in the dark green of the Marines was standing in front of the Central Hotel on West Fourth street. He might be able to tell her something. He might have known her son; might have been in his company and regiment. Thousands of soldiers in the city. Oh, it was futile to hope that this Marine standing across the street might be able to comfort her heart, might be able to tell her that story that would appease the ache in her heart.

She went across the street and hesitatingly addressed him. She asked his company, his regiment, and did he know Corporal Russell, Company C, 5th Regiment, Marines?

"God, lady! He was my buddy! He was at my side when he fell, when he died! Are you his mother?"

"Yes, I am his mother." The husky Marine had to take her by the arm to support her. The sudden shock for the moment overcame her.

Then with hundreds of people passing by unmindful of the little tragedy that was being enacted, the Marine told the story to this Gold Star Mother. They stood on the sidewalk in front of the hotel. "Cliff was my Corporal. I was his 'second jack.' We were buddies," the Marine said, and then he told of that great charge of the Americans in Belleau Wood. He told her of the death of his buddy, the son of this mother that stood before him.

"Was there a message?" The words were spoken hardly above a whisper.

No Time For Last Message.

"There was no message. He was at my side when he fell. We went on. God! We had to go on!" the Marine said.

His voice was husky. She was in tears. Finally he finished his story. There was no message for her from her son who had made the supreme sacrifice "over there" for his country, but her heart was comforted. She could visualize the epic charge in Belleau Wood and though tears coursed down her cheeks, her heart must have experienced a thrill of pride that her boy had been one of the bravest of the brave of that irresistible onslaught.

Came From Germantown.

The mother, Mrs. Russell, had come from Germantown, her home, to take part in the convention of the Legion Auxiliary. When she left her home she had not the slightest idea that she would meet a buddy of her son, one who was with him when he fell. She was unable to say what led her to address this one soldier of the thousands in Williamsport and ask him if he knew her boy.

The Marine was Jack Barry, of Clearfield. Before he left her he said, "You watch the parade tomorrow. I will gather a platoon of Marines, and we will march in honor of your son—of my buddy, Corporal Cliff Russell. You will know that we will march in his honor and perhaps you will be the only one in this city who will know. The others will march for another purpose, but we march for Cliff."

Barry was billeted at the Community House on West Fourth street while in the city. When he returned to his Clearfield comrades in the Community House he was in tears. And the tears flowed unrestrainedly when he told his story.

The next day Mrs. Russell watched the parade for the platoon of Marines marching in honor of her boy. File after file, squad after squad passed, but she did not see them.

Neither did she hear the music of the bands, nor the rhythmic tramp of marching feet.

Suddenly however, a thrill shot through her veins as she beheld a platoon of soldiers in the dark green of the Marines, marching with heads erect, in perfect alignment, with perfect rhythm.

And Barry marched at their head! Only that Gold Star Mother and that platoon of Marines knew why they marched—in honor of a soldier sleeping the eternal sleep beneath the plain white cross in the cemetery in France!

IN JAIL ON SERIOUS CHARGE

The "City of Broken Hearts" is in for some more unenviable notoriety. A girl named Welker, on information made before 'Squire John last evening, had John Rader arrested on a charge of felonious rape. Rader was lodged in jail by Constable Reilly.

Last Saturday Roy Welker, brother of the prosecutrix in this case, was arrested and placed in jail on information made by Juvenile Officer Leavy, charging a similar crime against Rader's 9-year-old daughter.

The principals in these affairs live in the little settlement at the upper end of Park avenue, beyond the borough line.

and not only snapped off a front axle but smashed a wheel and otherwise damaged the machine.

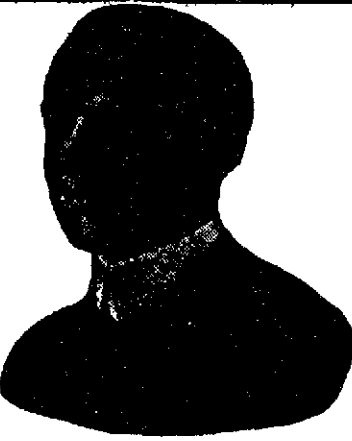

The accident occurred about 9 o'clock. Mr. Kline was traveling toward Woodland. Shortly after crossing the Clearfield Creek bridge he saw a Ford in the road ahead of him. The Ford, which was being driven by a foreigner, was wheeling along up the grade and, deciding to pass, Mr. Kline gave the flivver the horn. The driver turned aside as though to let the car past, but just as Mr. Kline came up alongside the fellow switched his flivver back into the road and in order to avoid being side-swiped Kline was forced to turn his car so quickly that he ran into the bank, causing the damage mentioned as the Ford ambled safely away in the distance. None of the occupants of the Kline car suffered more than a strenuous shaking up.

Faulty Steering Gear Causes Wreck

Wes. Lansberry, Jake Rothrock and Milt Goss, of West Side, were victims of an automobile accident which occurred along the Philipsburg-Clearfield State Highway early last evening. They were driving toward Clearfield in Mr. Lansberry's Dodge touring car and when near the school house beyond Woodland something went wrong with the steering gear, the car became unmanageable and leaving the road upset in a field.

The car was badly used up, but the occupants were lucky enough to escape with slight injuries although Mr. Goss received a severe cut above the eyes, which required eleven stitches to close, but Mr. Lansberry's injuries consisted of minor bruises.

Thoughtful motorists ask definitely for "ATLANTIC Medium"

Don't be satisfied with a medium oil that merely looks "medium." Only the highest heat-resisting hydrocarbons of the crude petroleum, selected and assembled by the Atlantic process of refining, can give an oil the character or kind of "body" needed to withstand the incessant attacks of heat, friction and impact developed in an automobile engine. So, ask definitely for and you'll get an oil that not only holds its "body," but that possesses all the fluidity required to reach close-fitting bearings at low as well as high temperatures. Atlantic Medium is a balanced lubricant that can be relied on to meet the wide range of conditions a motor oil encounters.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The fellow who first told us "there is nothing new under the sun," sure did know what he was talking about. The trials and tribulations which vex us nowadays, in almost similar form, were causing our forebears just as much trouble with "their problems" in their day:—

Do you ever wonder how modern life compares with long ago in America, when grandpa was a lad? Turn back eighty-three years and see whether you would exchange places. Times were hard, in 1839. The United States bank, having over-speculated in cotton, was forced to suspend operations. The failure involved only $2,000,000 in deposits, but it precipitated a financial panic in which over 400 banks were obliged to close, many of them for good.

Congress, as usual, shot off on a tangent and got interested in something else. It raised a cyclone of oratory against the "barbarity" of using a pack of bloodhounds that had been imported from Cuba to track down Seminole Indians in Florida. Before the talking subsided, the dogs were abandoned as inefficient.

The cheer-up crew told the nation that its hope for prosperity was in foreign trade. Great elation when Messrs. Baldwin, Vail & Hufty announced that their Philadelphia plant had received orders for several locomotives for English railroads.

It was in 1839 that Charles Good-year perfected his process of vulcanizing rubber. Another inventive sensation of the year was furnished by Prof. John William Draper of University of New York, who announced he had made "the first photographic portrait ever taken from life."

W. F. Harnden, Boston plunger, started the first express service in 1839, carrying packages between his city and New York.

The wilderness was far from conquered. In Florida the Indians were on the warpath, a bounty of $200 on their heads.

A row broke out between England and America over the boundary of Maine. Regulars were rushed to the border and after a winter's "persuasion" succeeded in calming the Maine farmers, who had decided to settle the argument with their rifles.

A marvel of 1839 was that the cost of running the national government was less than $38,000,000 for the year. The national debt then was a trifle over $12,650,000.

Otherwise, the year 1839 was uneventful, except for customary trouble with Mexico. Still, there's a certain glamor about those old days, and maybe the reason we moderns sometimes complain that life is dull is because so any sensational things happen that we are becoming jaded.

Life today is a carnival—very interesting at first, then boring after a while, the spectators wanting to get away where it's quiet. There is such a thing as life being so super-interesting that it's dull. Extremes meet.

Sweden has a new marriage code which embodies several novelties of very advanced nature. Irma C. Longren, of the Federal Children's Bureau, enumerates these in a letter to The Survey:

"By its new marriage code, which went into effect last year . . . the law provides that only the man and woman who are mentally and physically fit may marry. No one may do so who is feeble-minded, insane, epileptic . . . or afflicted with venereal disease in a contagious state. No man under twenty-one and no woman under eighteen may marry."

"The principal idea embodied in the new law seems to be to place husband and wife side by side as equally free and independent persons. . . . Both must contribute to the support of the family according to their ability. A woman who has no money income but devotes herself to the care of the home fulfills her duties in this way. If, however, she is a wage earner, it is her duty, as well as her husband's, to contribute

U. S. SHOULD OWN THEM

Uncle Sam appears to be getting interested in the "own our own home" movement with respect to the buildings he occupies for postoffice purposes throughout the country.

The "Why Pay Rent?" slogan means even more to the uncivilized personage who typifies the government of the United States than to the average renter faced with the problem of gratifying the constantly increasing itching of the landlord's palm, for aside from the fact of the prodigious number of his local domiciles in towns and cities where he handles the people's mail, he has been the particularly juicy prey of the profiteer. The government, in short, is regarded as the easiest kind of an easy mark when it comes to renting property and, moreover, a legitimate victim to be mulcted out of all the conscience of the lessee will stand, if there be any such measure applicable to the landlord-tenant problem.

The profiteering factor aside, the proposition that the government own postoffices buildings is soundly in keeping with the general idea of applying business principles to the conduct of public business, which is by no means the least of the important things to the credit of the present administration to date. It is in line with the budget system, already adopted, with resultant saving of scores of millions of dollars to the taxpayers. At present the annual rent bill for postoffice buildings is $12,000,000. Rentals are being paid on property representing money borrowed at from 7 to 10 per cent interest, whereas the government could build its own postoffice structures on money obtained at 4 per cent, and there would be no taxes, which, in the case of buildings now rented, are added to the price exacted by the investors. Add to the saving that would be affected under normal circumstances the saving through relief from pure extortion, and the wisdom of the government-owned buildings is beyond question.

There is nothing of what might be termed the romantic political interest in a matter of this kind, as there is with regard to the general policy affairs of statecraft with which Congress and a national administration have to deal, but happily the interest of business men in government on business principles is cultivating an appreciation on the part of the entire public which is likely to figure more largely in the political equation in the future than it has in the past.

UTOPIA

A country without an army, a navy, a national debt or an income tax—such is Tonga, last remaining native kingdom of the South Seas.

Every male in Tonga is presented with eight and a quarter acres of land when he reaches the age of sixteen. The treasury has $500,000 surplus, all public improvements have been paid for, and a complete educational system has been set up.

Tonga presents the nearest approach to Utopia on this planet. Although it is a tiny island, greater nations like our own might get some good lessons there.

Switzerland, another little country, is run on a different plan. The Swiss have the best drilled army in the world, they have no need for a navy, as the country is in the center of troubled Europe. The national sport is shooting and military practice.

Why isn't Switzerland like Tonga? Why does it have the big proportionate army that its taxpayers are forced to support? It is because Tonga is surrounded by the far reaches of the Pacific Ocean, and no other country has been greedy enough yet to grind it with the iron heel. Switzerland has gone through centuries of warfare with all the greedy nations that surround it. It is the victim of geography.

But Tongans and Swiss are alike in this—they mind their own affairs, they are prosperous and they have seen the value of education.

If all the nations of the world would spend the brains and money on education that now go for war plots and rotten diplomacy, the Swiss could throw their guns away, and all the world would be like Tonga.

RUSSIA'S WINTER PROSPECTS

A week or so ago the soviet government announced to the world that Russia's crops would this year be sufficient to supply abundant food to the people of that country. Perhaps this statement may still be taken at its face value; or perhaps it should have been accompanied by a condition. Moscow dispatches state that although the German government is under contract to supply Russia 700 locomotives, it is doubtful if Russia receives them in time to help move the crops. Russia may have food enough provided there is proper distribution of it.

And there is another condition which the statement seems not to have presented. This condition attaches to the government itself, in that its policy has been and still is to take from the producer the major portion of his products. If this policy is still pursued, if the wheat grower is left only 30 bushels in every 100 he raised, and the government is unable to send the 70 bushels it takes to those portions of the country where it is needed, Russia may not have abundant food the coming winter. There may be a vast deal more truth in the Moscow dispatch that "Russia again faces a winter of suffering."

How Aluminum Occurs.

Aluminum is not found in a pure form, but in combination, chiefly as an oxide in the mineral corundum (ruby, sapphire and emery); hydrated oxide in bauxite; phosphate in diaspore; hydrated phosphate in wavellite; hydrous sulphate in combination with potash in alundite and in combination with oxygen and metals as stannates, as in spinel, chrysoberyl and garnet. It also is found as a silicate in various clays. Its chief ore is bauxite.

Why the Moon Is Arid.

The moon is a smaller globe than the earth. Its gravity is only one-sixth of that of ours. As a consequence the atmospheric pressure normal to the moon is far too low to condense water. Steam issuing from a vent remains steam. The internal forces of the steam's molecules are greater than the attractive force of the moon. Steam flows away as it emerged, leaving the moon arid and waterless. —Chicago Tribune.

"Gentlemen of the Guard."

The original function of the household cavalry was to protect the king's person, and Charles II saw to it that his life guards were recruited from old Cavalier families. Even the privates were men of very good families, and were well paid. Their fine uniforms and finer swagger were an essential part of the splendor of Whitehall. They were called "Gentlemen of the Guard."

Beliefs Concerning Lightning.
Continental Europe had, and has, its superstitions regarding lightning. In some parts it is believed that the bird called cross-bill, kept in the house as a pet, is a sure preventive of destruction of the house by lightning or fire. It is said that this power is granted to the bird because it used its peculiarly shaped bill, with the two mandibles curved and crossed over each other to extract the nails from the wounds of Christ impaled on the cross.

Ideals Must Be Put to Use.

It's a fine thing to produce an ideal. It's worse than folly to develop it mentally and let it die there. Ideals to be known must be made tangible. If they remain creatures of our own brains they may help us some, but not much. To be of worth they must become inspirations to others.—Grit.

Oratory Analyzed.

What orators lack in depth they make up in length.—Montesquieu.

The Dangerous Age.

"She thought that fifty years of age is nothing nowadays—if you are not an old maid and if you decorate yourself properly. Some women of fifty are still dangerously attractive—they act leading parts on the stage, they appear in divorce cases, they marry their third husbands."—From "The Spinster of the Parish," by W. B. Maxwell.

Microbe's Happy Hunting Ground.
According to estimate the human body contains a microbe population equal to a thousand million times the whole human population of the earth.

The Whence of the Alphabet.

According to Dr. C. E. Meade, the Egyptologist, the alphabet was not invented by the Phoenicians, who merely "lifted" twenty-two letters from the Egyptians, and then spread them as their own through Greece and Italy.

Moon Absolutely Without Water.
There is no water on the moon. The mountains there are as dry as powder. They are desiccated far beyond the extremes of the most parched of earthly deserts. On this globe there is always a little water to be found, even in the most baked and unpromising spots. Only a few drops, perhaps, but water. On the moon there is not even one drop.—S. F. Maxwell, in the Chicago Tribune.

To Preserve Sandstone.
To preserve sandstone against decay, two methods have been suggested that have proved effective. If a piece of rotten sandstone is treated with certain chemical compounds of alcohol and silica and then exposed to moist air, the silica is deposited and forms a protective cement coating. Limestone has also been found very effective for the same purpose.—Popular Science Magazine.

Meteorites.

Though there is some uncertainty as to the origin of meteoric stones or meteorites, says the Scientific American, they probably are the minute fragments of the primitive solar nebula that failed to be swept up originally in the formation of the larger members of the system and which finally chanced to be trapped by the earth's atmosphere.

Inbreeding of Species.

In an experiment with 600 white rats belonging to the sixteenth to the twenty-fifth generations of brothers and sisters from the same litter, it was found that close inbreeding produced no deterioration.

Contributed Verse.

There's joy in the smile of an artless child; there's joy in a maiden's eyes; there's joy in the spring when the songbirds sing; there's joy in a lover's sighs. But such joys all pale and easily fade to compare with the joyous thrill of the woman who knows that her new spring clothes gives her rival a nervous chill.—Boston Transcript.

The $50,000 Operation

By HUBERT RAY

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Breathe away! Breathe away, Mr. Fotheringay."

There was deference even in the voice of the anesthetist, and in the way he deferentially placed the ether cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose, for it was a $50,000 operation, and Mr. Fotheringay was many times a millionaire.

Yes, that was Mr. Fotheringay, that bulky lying unconscious upon the glass-topped table; that bloated bulk of a man, to operate upon whom Professor Openhim had been summoned by special train from Chicago.

The table containing the inanimate form of Professor Openhim's patient was wheeled into the operating theater adjoining. The benches were packed with serious-faced students and many medical men of the city, who had assembled to see something removed from the stomach of Mr. Fotheringay.

Mr. Fotheringay had swallowed a small, hard, round metallic object. So much the X-ray had revealed. There it lay, in Mr. Fotheringay's stomach interfering with the processes of digesting lobster a la Newburg and other viands such as are prepared for men of Mr. Fotheringay's social position.

"How did you come to swallow that?" the surgeon had asked Mr. Fotheringay.

"Must have been biting it," Mr. Fotheringay responded.

The white-robed nurses were grouped in a solid phalanx about the operating table. At least half a dozen of Professor Openhim's assistants were present to assist. One had to hold the forceps, another inserted sponges in the wound that was to be inflicted upon Mr. Fotheringay. Others were simply there to lend prestige to Professor Openhim and to dignify the day—for it was a $50,000 operation.

Mr. Fotheringay was well known in the city, not only as the richest man, but as the biggest skinfint imaginable. He was the sort of man who would foreclose on a widow's mortgage and turn a starving child from his door. Nevertheless, such was the prestige of Mr. Fotheringay that even his incredible meanness vanished into nothingness before the stupendous fact of his wealth.

The surgeon took his scalpel in his hand, and a low sigh of distress went up as he made an incision in the body of Mr. Fotheringay.

It seemed sacrilege. Only a man with nerves so well attuned as Professor Openhim's could have ventured upon the act. Nevertheless, once he had begun he continued just as if Mr. Fotheringay had been an ordinary patient.

Professor Openhim's hand did not tremble in the least. Nor did the anesthetist's fingers shake as he slowly and methodically let the ether drip upon the cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose.

The operation was drawing to an end. Mr. Fotheringay had borne the shock well. He was still unconscious, and he had not stirred from first to last. Only the stertorous breathing had indicated that Mr. Fotheringay's soul still inhabited its earthly tabernacle.

One might have wondered what it was doing while Mr. Fotheringay, looking like a distressingly fat turkey, was being carved. But such speculations are sternly discouraged among physicians and surgeons, especially of Professor Openhim's eminence. The last stitches were drawn and the suturing completed. A horrid thought struck all those about the table simultaneously.

Suppose a sponge or a pair of forceps had been left in Mr. Fotheringay's wound?

They counted the sponges and the forceps eagerly. Nothing had been left behind. And in his hand the operating surgeon held the metal disk that had been taken out of Mr. Fotheringay's body.

Mr. Fotheringay was wheeled out of the operating room, through the anesthetist room into the private room that had been allotted to him. It was the most magnificent private room in the hospital. There lay Mr. Fotheringay in bed, looking a little less fat and turkey-like, and by his bedside sat a nurse, waiting for the moment when Mr. Fotheringay might decide to open his eyes.

Mr. Fotheringay had not opened his eyes, but he was speaking. "Did they find it? Did they find it?" he asked in a weak whisper.

"Yes, yes, Mr. Fotheringay," answered the nurse.

"Mr. Fotheringay stretched out his hand. 'Give it to me,' he muttered. The nurse took the metal disk from the bureau and placed it in Mr. Fotheringay's hand. It was a dime.

Young Solomon.

Elmer Glyn, the daring novelist, said at a Coronado tea:

"Youth has strange ideas. I saw a composition that a Los Angeles boy of fourteen wrote the other day on 'The Ages of Man.' The composition ran like this:

"There are three ages of man. One, When we are young we think of the sins we will commit when we grow up. This is the Age of Innocence.

"Two, When we grow up we commit these sins. This is called the Prime of Life.

"Three, When we are old we are sorry we committed them. This is our Dotage."

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS FIRST MEETING

The Woman's Club held the first meeting of the club year Tuesday evening at the recreation building of the textile mill. The Junior Woman's Club members were their guests and there were about forty of each club in attendance. Mrs. Kurtz, the president of the senior organization, conducted a short business meeting and outlined the program for the year and named the various committees and their duties.

The evening's entertainment was in the hands of the three ex-presidents. They started things with an old-fashioned spelling bee, the Juniors versus the Seniors and much to the chagrin of the older women, the young people held their own nobly. The new club song books were put in use for some good singing, then Miss Josephine McMurray gave three very clever readings, accompanied by Mrs. Gallaher on the piano.

The social committee served light refreshments and a very successful meeting came to a satisfying close. The Woman's Club feels deeply indebted to Mr. Geynet for the use of the rooms.

Common and Preferred Stock

Preferred stock in a corporation is a share which is entitled to a dividend before any other dividend is payable to the holders of the common stock. Common stock receives its dividend after the preferred stock, but the dividend is not limited. Holders of preferred and common stock in a company are contributors to its capital and are members of the corporation.

Philosopher's Nickname.

Boring Metals.

Brass, copper, iron, steel and other metals are easily drilled if you use oil or grease as a lubricant. Do not try to drill too rapidly, and when nearly through the metal go very slowly, as a drill may easily be broken by trying to turn it too rapidly as it pushes itself through the surface.

LOCK HAVEN MAN FINDS STOLEN AUTO AT CLEARFIELD

L. A. Brown, a Lock Haven undertaker, lost a Cadillac "bug" several days ago and yesterday received a letter dated Erie, Pa., and which was written by two former Lock Haven young men, saying they had swiped his car and driven it as far as Clearfield, where they abandoned it at the Commercial Garage and then taken the train for Erie, where they were now working to earn money enough to pay him rent for his car while they were using it.

Undertaker Brown and a man named Harris came to Clearfield this morning, secured the car and drove it home.

PRIMARY RESULTS IN MANY STATES; TREND OF VOTERS FAVORS G. O. P.

Results of primary elections held in eight states yesterday were being tabulated today.

Nation-wide attention was being focused on the result of the Massachusetts polling where Henry Cabot Lodge, veteran statesman, was renominated as the Republican candidate for the United States Senate with a plurality of at least 72,000, a three to one lead.

In Michigan Charles Townsend, a friend and supporter of Newberry, was nominated as Republican candidate for the United States Senate.

Another Senator, Miles Poindexter, who voted to seat Newberry, was victorious in the Republican Senatorial primary in Washington.

A surprise was sprung in the Colorado election when William E. Seet, a millionaire, endorsed by labor and non-partisan league voters, won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination by an unexpectedly large majority.

Primaries were also held in South Carolina, Arkansas, Vermont and Louisiana, but these were not viewed by political observers as important from a national point of view.

The Advantages of Matrimony.

"I'm a believer in women getting married. It doesn't matter so much for men, but for women it's the correct thing. Does 'em good and improves their characters. NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I can't express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HENSLY, 41 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH REINHOLD, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

A LARGE ORDER

"Do you always speak the whole truth and nothing but the truth?" "I don't claim to be as strong as all that," replied Senator Sorghum. "A man who undertakes to ascertain truth in its entirety and then to sift out all the elements of non-veracity is likely to find that he has used up the better part of a lifetime in contemplative silence."

An Appropriate Name.

"I wonder," said Perkins, "why they named this picture theater the Beehive?" "Have you ever seen any of their pictures?" asked his friend. "Never." "Well, if you ever do, you'll know the reason, all right, because after each one you feel as though you'd been stung."—Judge.

The Cynic.

"They seem very much in love with each other." "How long have they been married?" "Two weeks." "I don't like to appear cynical, but keep an eye on them for a couple of years and report to me what they seem to think of each other then."

A LADY KILLER.

"I wonder what happened when the dish ran away with the spoon." "I suppose it was a sad blow to the potato masher."

Ready Money.

I rather like the five and ten and wander in there now and then. Among those counters trim and trig a dollar bill does look so big.

A Howells Story.

D. M. B. sends us the following neat retort once made by the late W. D. Howells. A lean, long Yankee acquaintance was twitting the eminent novelist on his corpulence. "If I were as fat as you, Howells," he said, "I would go and hang myself." "Well," returned W. D. quietly, "if I ever take your advice I'll use you for a rope."

Safe.

While an English politician was speaking on taxation he was interrupted by a man shouting: "Are you going to tax my food? Are you going to tax my food?" Some one in the rear of the hall rang out: "Oh, stop your braying; thistles will never be taxed."

The Changeless Record.

"You would rather be photographed than interviewed?" "I'm not so sure about that," answered Senator Sorghum. "If a photograph happens to present you in a disadvantageous attitude there's no chance for you to come out next day with a statement that it has been faked."

She Learned Something.

"So you've been around the world?" asked the young housewife. "Yes, mum," said the applicant for broken victuals. "I went around on tramp steamer." "Dear me! I didn't know there were steamers that made a specialty of catering to tramps."

Wants to Know the Truth.

Citizen (to beggar at the door)—So you've been out of work long? "Yes, sir; but lately I've dreamed three times that I got a job, and if you'll finance me a bit I shall buy a dream book and find out if it means anything."

A VERSION.

"Do you object to anyone who eats onions?" "Yes. I very much dislike any ostentation of wealth."

An Eastern Saying.

In talk he's a wonder, But small are his gains, How loud is the clunder! How little it rains!

Variety Desired.

"What is your idea of a good form of taxation?" "Most anything," replied Senator Sorghum, "that gives us a change from what we've grown used to and gotten tired of."

Complicated.

In the Third Round

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"In the third round, don't forget, kid," Barney had whispered. "Go in for all you're worth, and he'll go easy with you. Then in the third you get it on the jaw and goes down—see?"

Abe nodded. The principals faced each other in the ring. Lofsky, the champion, grinned at Abe and tapped him lightly on the cheek. They sparred and broke away.

Abe was dimly conscious of the vast concourse of spectators. It was the great event toward which he had been working for five years past—his ambition, the welterweight championship. It had been difficult to find a big man willing to meet him. He had fought his way up from the bottom, and he had had tough luck.

And now, at the last, the thing that he had looked forward to so long had become his infamy. Abe had always fought straight. He was the logical man to meet Lofsky. But Lofsky had refused to meet him. And Abe's young wife and the baby were pining in an East Side tenement.

Then temptation had come in the form of Barney. Lofsky would meet him for the purse of nine thousand dollars, if he would take two thousand and a knockout.

Abe had refused scornfully. He knew that he was a fair match against Lofsky. But things at home were going worse, and Minnie was threatened with tuberculosis. In the end Abe yielded.

"It ain't as if it was your finish, kid," Barney had said to him. "Nobody expects you to beat Lofsky, and no one will know. You'll get your chance again some day."

That was the understanding under which they met.

Abe rushed in, pummeling Lofsky mercilessly about the body. Lofsky parried and guarded, returning an occasional blow which lacked all of Lofsky's steam. At first Abe thought Lofsky was mindful of the compact; but then he realized that the big man had not trained for the fight. He was beefy, puffy, with too much stomach over his belt.

And then Abe saw that his chance had come. Lofsky had not trained, and he was trained to the ounce. Victory was within his reach, with seven thousand instead of two as his share of the proceeds.

He could redeem himself and fight fair, as he had always done, in confidence of victory, and so avoid the worst offense known to the prize ring.

On the other hand, if he tricked Lofsky and his manager, would he not be guilty of an offense equally bad?

The dilemma was a hideous one, and there seemed no way to escape dishonor.

And suddenly he saw red. He would beat Lofsky at any rate, if he could. He sprang in and dealt him a blow upon the jaw that staggered him. After that he fought furiously, standing up under a rain of punches. He heard Lofsky grunt, he saw the look of surprise come into his face.

The round ended amid tumultuous applause. Abe hardly heard the whispered advice of his seconds. When the next round began he rushed at Lofsky and began driving him all around the ring. A fearful stomach blow momentarily crippled him; then he had sent out his left, and Lofsky had reeled and fallen.

The spectators were growing frantic. Was this another David? There was an ugly look on Lofsky's face as he rose and met Abe's showering blows. There was a clinch. Then Lofsky got some on Abe's stomach and cheek, two staggering punches that evened things. Abe grew cool. He had been rushing too hard. He guarded for the remainder of the second round.

The third round—the men faced one another. Lofsky was sneering. There was a cut over his eye, and his nose was bleeding. There was a look of uncertainty in his eyes. Abe resolved to put forth all his might in this round, the one in which he was booked to go down. He rushed. He beat down Lofsky's guard. And then—

He opened his eyes. His second was stooping over him, sponging his face.

"What's the matter?" he mumbled.

"Did he get me?" "Got you in the middle of the round, kid. Gee, an ox couldn't have stood up against a punch like that of Lofsky's. Say, you sure put up a better fight than was expected!"

As he staggered to his corner Lofsky came up and shook hands. "Gee, kid, you certainly hit me guessing," he remarked. "I thought for sure you'd double-crossed me. Tell you let down your guard, or I wouldn't have struck so hard."

Abe smiled. There was a great peace in his heart. He had been beaten fairly—and fate had ordained that he was to keep his pact. He would fight fair in future. And Lofsky would have to meet him again. He must be ready next time for that punch of Lofsky's.

Colorful Reading.

Not long ago, writes a contributor, while my nephew was consulting the librarian at the Fresno city library, a small boy entered with a book that his mother wished exchanged. But, since she had neglected to send a list of books to choose from, the librarian was somewhat at a loss to know what book to send. Finally she asked:

"Has your mother read 'Peckles'?"

"No, ma'am," replied the boy.

The Progress correspondent has been requested by the ladies interested to announce that the "Teen department" of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday schools will hold a food sale at Jimmie's Sweet Shop on Saturday commencing at one o'clock p. m. The proceeds will be applied to the church repairing fund.

Miss Staak, representing the Swarthmore people, has been in town several days week trying to interest Curwensville people in assembling a three day session of a winter Chautauqua. She has met with some encouragement in her quest. From an educational standpoint it represents the best, and we believe the people would be vastly benefited to have it come for a few days at least.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Cowher, of Patton, spent a day or two in town departing for their home on Tuesday, being accompanied by Mrs. C. L. Frank.

Lex Caldwell has purchased a dwelling house on Susquehanna avenue from Mrs. Lash. The Caldwell family only arrived in Curwensville a week ago from Illinois.

We have been requested to announce that a Harvest Home and Old Folks service will be held in the M. E. church next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. M. J. Runyan, of Wallacetown, will be the speaker. Gifts of vegetables, canned fruit, jellies, etc will be thankfully received and donated to the Old Folks Home at Tyrone.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Day Kirk, of Pittsburg, are visiting Mr. Kirk's mother Mrs. A. M. Kirk. It pleases us to announce that Day is one of Curwensville's boys that has made good in the financial world. He is now vice-president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad and Coal Company. During the strike this company had no trouble whatever with their employees and all seemed happy and pleased with their treatment and work.

From a paper published in the city of Bogalusa, Louisiana, we glean the information that two former Pike township boys are making their mark in the world and that both are men of affluence in their adopted home. We refer to E. R. Cassidy, who last week was nominated as one of the three members of a Commission council on the Democratic ticket, receiving a larger majority than the other two nominees. W. H. Cassidy, a brother, was chosen as a member of the State Highway Department, his duty being to pass on new roads asked for by the people residing in his and adjoining Parishes, as townships in that State are called. Both of these men are sons of John Cassidy, who was a well known lumberman in this and other counties.

Mrs. Fennypacker, mother of Mrs. Curtin, was reported last evening as being quite ill at the home of her daughter.

Raymond Wingert, of the South Side, leaves today for Yardley, New Jersey. He is taking an automobile that was used by Neff, a former foreman at the stone siding, back to its owner, Chas. Eastburn.

Health Officer Weaver posted a typhoid fever card on the premises occupied by James Lamb, Grampian road. There is one other case of fever on South Side of Anderson Creek above the upper bridge, these being the only two cases of contagious diseases in the borough at present.

John Broome and family, who have been residing at Millersburg, Pa., for the past four or five years, will move to Clearfield to make their home. Mr. Broome being transferred to that point. Their daughter, Helen, is a student at Indiana Normal school.

The employees at Summit sole leather tannery received a raise of a trifle over ten per cent. in wages the same to date from September 1st. There was no jumping up and down on the scale of the raise, but every man and raise increased equally, therefore they had no kick coming on the ground that one man received more than another.

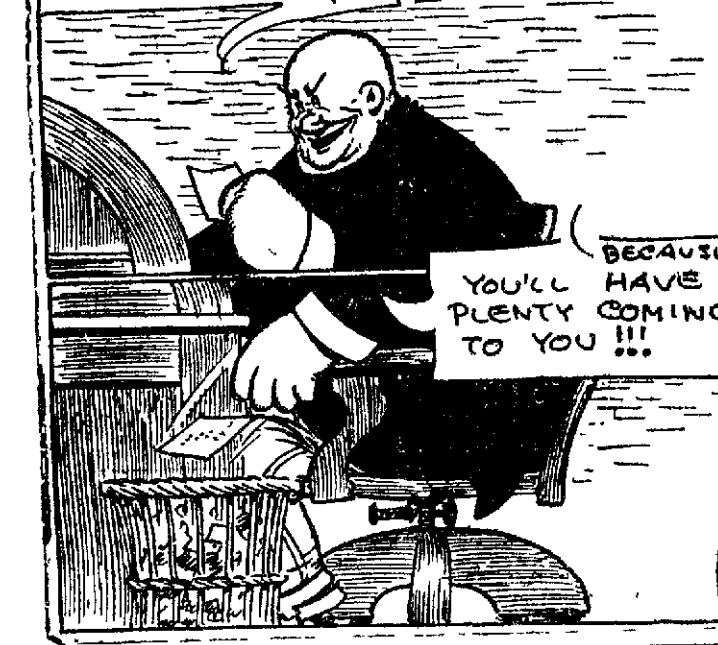

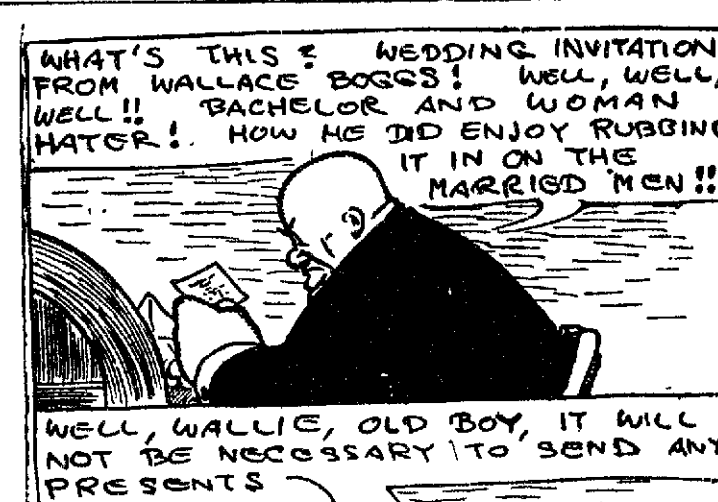

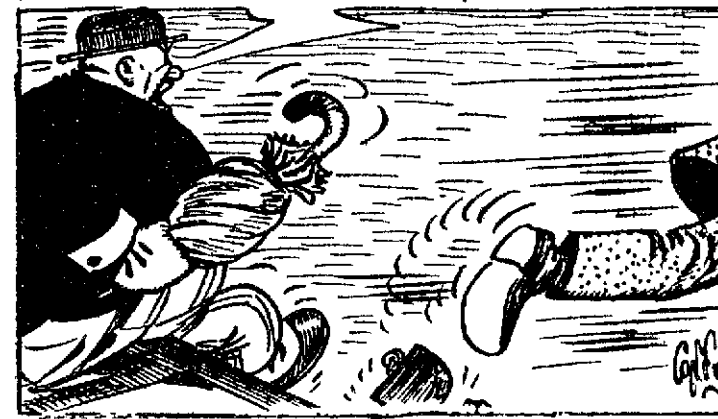

Mrs. Sterley Garrison, who lives in Trenton, New Jersey, accompanied by a young daughter, is visiting in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs.

Many Needed to Save State. To be a voice outside the state speaking to mankind or to the future perhaps shaking the actual state to pieces in doing so, one man will suffice. But to reform the state in order to save it, to preserve it by changing it, a body of workers is needed as well as a leader—a considerable body of workers, placed at many points, and operating in many directions.—Matthew Arnold.

U. CONVENTION

The Convention City for 1922 for the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is the city of Williamsport. Its location gives it a plentiful supply of good mountain water, and is considered the most healthful city in Pennsylvania, and the fourth in rank in the United States. Prominent speakers of State, National and World fame, will take part in this Convention, among whom will be Dr. Caroline Geisel, Little Creek Sanitarium, Hon. Pearls Long Imitated.

The imitation of pearls is not a new industry, but was carried on centuries ago. In the inventory of the jewels of a French lady of high degree in 1731 there is named "un collier de perles fausses," a necklace of false pearls, but more than a century earlier pearls were made in France by a jeweler named Jaquin, and so successful was his manufacture, it was said the finer ones were bought up by the dealers of Asia and became rare in France.

"I knew him when he was a boy"

What one is there of us that has not felt the glow of satisfaction over the outstanding success of a life-long friend! Often a surprise—seemingly "all of a sudden." Yet neither surprising nor sudden, when you stop to think back over each step of his progress.

THE United States Rubber Company—makers of U. S. Royal Cord—were first to conceive, make and announce the balanced tire. A tire in which there is such complete unity of action in tread and carcass that neither will give way before the other.

First to conceive, make and announce a complete line of tires—a tire for every need of price and use under one standard of quality.

First to tell the public about the good and bad in tire-retailing. (You remember the phrase "Go to a legitimate dealer and get a legitimate tire.")

First also to arouse industrial and trade minds to the need of a new kind of tire competition. (Competition for better and better values. Greater and greater public confidence.)

THESE high spots along the U. S. Road to leadership indicate the intent—the will to win by the quality route in a price market.

Now that so many car-owners have given their verdict for quality tires in general, and U. S. tires in particular—a number of dealers and car-owners whose vision has been clouded by "discounts," "sales" and what not, are beginning to remember that they "knew him when he was a boy."

RAIL PEACE AT CROSS ROADS WITH LEADERS OF SHOPMEN DEADLOCKED ON SEPARATE AGREEMENTS; INJUNCTION HEARING ON

While Contending Factions Among The Strikers
Appear To Be Getting Further Apart Government Goes Ahead To Place Responsibility For
Wrecks And Disorder On Men.

PEACE IS STILL FURTHER AWAY TODAY

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Rail peace stood at the cross-roads today with the leaders of the shop unions deadlocked.

One faction, led by Bert M. Jewell, president of the shop crafts, was voicing approval of separate agreements with railroads willing to compromise.

Another, including, it is reported, more than half of the 90 general chairmen who form the policy committee, stood out firmly for no settlement.

Early in the day Jewell and other leaders prophesied an early settlement. As the sessions wore on general opposition to separate agreements crystallized into formidable opposition to the leaders and at adjournment it was stated "no definite action has been taken."

Hearing Continues.

While strike leaders were trying to work their way out of their immediate problem, the Government was trying to prove that they are guilty of a general conspiracy against the railroads in an equally hot session before Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The court put the onus of proof that the strike leaders have been responsible for murders, wrecks, disastrous transportation holdups, and crop losses, directly up to Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty. Attorney Donald R. Richberg, for the strikers, asked the court to modify the injunction prohibiting all activities by strikers and their leaders. Judge Wilkerson asked Richberg to withdraw his motion with leave to renew it at once.

"It is up to the government to prove the facts in this case," he said. "The question raised by the Government's allegations (conspiracy) is a vital one and must be proved before modification of the injunction can be undertaken."

The Government continued throughout the day to lay the basis for the conspiracy charge. Blackman, Petline, assistant attorney general, continued to introduce thousands of telegrams, affidavits and depositions alleging, by direct statement or implication, that the strikers have been responsible for all manner of disorders.

Peace Further Away.

With adjournment of the policy committee meeting tonight, it was stated by general chairmen that "peace is further away than it was yesterday."

PENN STATE OPENS WITH 3,300 PUPILS ON BOOKS FOR 1922

Pres. Thomas Welcomes
Largest Body Of Students
In The College's
History Today.

1,000 NEW FACES

State College, Pa., Sept. 13.—The college auditorium was entirely inadequate to care for the more than 3,000 students who were on hand this morning when the Pennsylvania State College opened its doors for its 68th year. A third of the men and women were members of the incoming Freshman class, many of whom were unable to get inside the doors of the building for the opening exercises. President John M. Thomas welcomed the new students to Penn State and said in part:

"There is a very challenging expression the American language has acquired in recent years—'It's up to you.' With that challenge Penn State greets you."

"There are glorious opportunities here—opportunities for culture and development of strong manhood, for professional attainment, for rewarding friendships, for great service to your fellow students and to the college, for distinction in the world of college men. We are glad to welcome each one of you, and we will all try to help you in our own way—the faculty in their way, your fellow-students in theirs."

"But we cannot make good for you. It will take grit, patience, hard work, common sense, and every manly quality you possess. But the end is worth the struggle, for real success in college almost inevitably means success in after life. We wish you well—but it's up to you."

During the past two days the gigantic task of enrolling the 1,000 new students and of arranging schedules for those of the upper classes has been going on from morning to night, and although the bulk of the registering closed with the opening of college this morning, late arrivals will still keep the office of the registrar in action for the balance of the week. It is estimated by Professor A. H. Espenshade, college registrar, that there will be 3,300 men and women enrolled at Penn State this fall—the largest number in the history of the institution. The annual Y. M. C. A. reception to the new students will be held on the front campus on Friday evening of this week.

Fort Worth Texas Sept. 13.—The Ladies of the Invisible Eye entered here southwest as an organization of terror last night. Mrs. I. C. Tatum, aged 45 was spirited from her home during the night and severely flogged by the "ladies," according to official reports. She is in a serious condition today from one hundred lashes from a quirt which were administered by a committee from the "Ladies of the Invisible Eye." County authorities in church women had requested Mrs. Tatum to surrender to the courts on the ground that she was receiving improper attentions. Mrs. Tatum told officers she was called from her home on the pretext that her daughter was ill and wished her to come. When she found the automobile in which she was being abducted was going in the opposite direction from where her daughter was she attempted to jump but was restrained by a male companion of the "ladies."

SCHOOLS ENROLL PRETTY NEAR 2400 PUPILS AT START

Public School Enrollment Reaches 2068 On Opening Day, With 275
At Parochial School.

40 TURNED AWAY

The Clearfield Schools both public and parochial, opened on Wednesday last with the largest attendance in their history. The combined total of the school children of the community as shown by the enrollment of the different schools shows 2,343 pupils.

The above is a remarkable showing and speaks volumes for the interest Clearfield people take in education. In addition to the total scholars enrolled the High School authorities were forced to refuse admission because of lack of room, to no less than forty out of town or tuition pupils who sought to enter.

The enrollment on opening day in the public schools was 98 per cent of the expectancy. This army of nearly 2100 pupils is being looked after and instructed by a corps of 63 teachers which total includes the High School Principal and City Superintendent Zerfos.

FARM BLOC ON JOB

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—With debate limited the House today tackled the conference report on the Tariff Act of 1922, with every assurance that the bill would be passed and rushed to the Senate before night. The bill was reported yesterday. Only four hours debate was to be allowed on the tariff. Although the wool, copper and sugar duties had bitter opposition the chief attack was on the dye embargo reinserted by the committee and the 1-2c rate on potash. The Farm Bloc was organized to battle for a reduction on potash, their aim being to force this article on the free list.

Couldn't Be Hooked If She Never Gave Note For Hook Company Stock Said Jury

The third week of September term of criminal court opened on Monday with Judge Bell presiding. The list for trial contained several cases of minor importance.

The first case called for trial was that of the Adjustable Gambrel Hook Co. vs. Mrs. Elvora Kuzman. This was a suit to recover $200, the amount of a note Mrs. Kuzman was alleged to have given Morris Skinner of DuBois, an agent of the company, for several shares of stock in the hook company.

Following this alleged transaction, the note was sold to Mrs. Maggie Shill of Punxsutawney, who, when she attempted to realize on same, found that she had got the "hook" when she made the alleged purchase of the note, as Mrs. Kuzman refused to be "hooked" by disclaiming ever having given Skinner any note.

The note was produced in evidence and bore the name of Mrs. Kuzman, and as she was unable to write the name had been written by another hand and carried what was alleged to be her mark, which she positively denied. Skinner testified the woman made the mark but the jury thought otherwise and returned a verdict for Mrs. Kuzman.

The plaintiff was represented by L. D. McCall, Esq., while John C. Arnold, Esq., conducted the defense for Mrs. Kuzman.

Clearfield-Philipsburg State Highway Is Scene
Of Two Wrecks, While East End Boy Of Eight
Is Knocked Down And Hurt By Car While Crossing Daisy Street.

TWO CARS ARE VERY BADLY DAMAGED

Sam Fama, the little 8 year old fellow and knocked him down along side the curb away from the wheels and this undoubtedly saved him from a more serious injury. Mr. Knepp stopped his car almost immediately and picking the boy up, placed him in his car and hurried him to the Clearfield Hospital where Dr. Waterworth examined him and found that beyond a slight cut in the head and a general shaking up he was unharmed. He will be kept in the hospital for 24 hours however for observation although he is reported as lively as a cricket this afternoon.

The accident occurred at the corner of Eighth and Daisy streets. Knepp was driving down Daisy street. A car was parked on the street close to the corner and the boy in attempting to cross the street stepped out from behind the parked car directly in front of Knepp's car.

When the boy stepped in front of the car he was too close for the driver to avoid striking him. As soon as he saw the lad Knepp swerved his car to the right but was upon the boy before he could jump back out of harm's way. The left fender struck the little Sydney, N. S., (By Mail to United Press)—This city of more than a million population has the lowest death rate in the world, namely 9.52 per thousand for the year 1921, according to statistics issued by the Metropolitan Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Purdy. Infantile mortality, recognized as the most sensitive index of sanitary progress, finds Sydney high in the scale of the communities which assure their babies' life. The death rate is only 63.1 per thousand of infants.

CLEARFIELD BOY AN ACTOR IN PATHETIC EPISODE ENACTED AT WILLIAMSPORT; GOLD STAR MOTHER MEETS SON'S BUDDIE

The following article is taken from the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin of Tuesday, Sept. 12th:—Thousands of white crosses in a cemetery in France mark the graves of thousands of American soldiers. One of these plain white crosses bears the inscription: "Corporal Clifford Russell, Company C, Fifth Regiment, U. S. Marines."

Thousands of soldiers gathered in Williamsport last week for the State convention of the American Legion. Thousands of relatives of soldiers gathered here also for the convention of the Auxiliary of the American Legion, among whom were a score or more of Gold Star mothers.

Mother Attending Convention. One of these Gold Star mothers was the mother of Corporal Russell, who is sleeping the eternal sleep in that cemetery in France. She knew that her son had died fighting for his country. She knew that he was sleeping "over there" with a plain white cross marking his grave. She knew that his country and grateful France would forever preserve his grave.

She knew he had died fighting; died a brave death and she was proud of her son for that. But perchance one of his buddies was here in Williamsport among the thousands of soldiers, Legionnaires, come to their State convention. Perchance one of them had seen him fall, had heard his last words—his last words, a message to his mother. Who knows? Longed For Story. Her mother's heart was aching to hear the story of his glorious death. (Continued on Page 2).

COAL TRAIN WRECK ON B. R. & P. ROAD BLOCKS TRAFFIC

A broken flange was the cause of a freight wreck on the B. R. & P. road yesterday afternoon, which piled up five cars in the cut above the W. Market street station and caused all trains on that road to transfer at Curwensville and come into Clearfield on the Pennsylvania.

Two cars of coal were upset completely blocking the cut and the other three cars to leave the rails piled up on this mass and made an afternoon and evening job for the wrecking crew.

The operation attracted a large crowd of the curious who stayed on the job until the track was cleared.

BOOTLEGGERS FALL OUT; ONLY ONE IS KILLED IN SCRAP

New York, N. Y., Sept. 13.—A clash of bootlegging clans caused one life and probably two others early today in a gun battle in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn. Leon Diamond, aged 14, a messenger boy, who strayed into the battle zone as the revolvers began spitting fire and lead was struck by a stray bullet. Two alleged smugglers were taken to a hospital shortly afterwards suffering from probably mortal wounds. Members of the opposing factions met at a neutral corner shortly after midnight lining up in doorways on either side of the intersecting streets and opening fire. The police arrived in time to arrest one alleged member of the gang and found the body of the slain messenger boy.

Just as he was about ready to leave for Georgetown Prep School at Washington, James Watery orth, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. S. J. Watery, was taken down with acute appendicitis and taken to Clearfield Hospital where an immediate operation was performed last evening.

The young man rallied nicely following the operation and his condition is highly satisfactory at this time.

Lancaster, Sept. 12.—Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, and David J. Davis, candidate for lieutenant-governor, tonight formally declined the nominations of the newly organized Progressive party and forwarded their affidavits of withdrawal to Harrisburg.

In a joint statement the two candidates said: "We have sought and won Republican nominations and accepted the obligations which go with them. Having done so, we cannot honorably accept nominations of a party whose purpose is to defeat in part the ticket on which we are running."

Signed, "GIFFORD PINCHOT, "DAVID J. DAVIS."

P. R. R. OFFICIALS ARE CENSURED FOR FIRE AT PITTSBURGH SHOP

Pittsburg, Sept. 13.—Severe censure of the officials and employees of the Pennsylvania railroad for conditions existing in the Modoc building was the most important feature of the verdict of the coroner's jury inquiring into the fatal fire which destroyed the Modoc building with a loss of seven lives on the morning of September 3.

The verdict, which was arrived at after two and a half hours' deliberations, gave the cause of the death of the seven workmen as accidental and stated that the evidence produced would throw no light on the origin of the fire.

Charging that 25 men were housed in a building which was largely filled with inflammable material, that legal provisions of the city governing alterations of buildings had been violated, that the means of exit from the sleeping quarters were entirely inadequate and that the railroad company's fire-fighting equipment virtually was useless on account of lack of efficient organization and training, the jury recommended that city and county officials proceed to investigate whether similar conditions prevail elsewhere and apply corrective measures.

LOCAL ROTARIANS WILL ENTERTAIN NEIGHBORING CLUBS

AMERICAN VESSEL CARRIES FOOD TO SMYRNA REFUGEES

Constantinople, Greece, Sept. 13.—The American destroyer "Estrail" has started for Smyrna with relief supplies for the 700,000 refugees there. Many children have died of starvation since the Turkish occupation and many others are in dire need of food. Mustafa Kemal, leader of the Turks has evidently been able to hold his troops in check, making them refrain from attacks on the christians.

said to view separate settlements as a complete backdown by the shop unions and a step that will crush the organizations.

Jewell and his adherents are favoring a separate agreement with the Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, Southern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and a number of other roads on the basis, it is reported, of full seniority, working conditions as of June 30, and wages on the present basis pending future conferences. This, the Jewell faction is said to hold, would give the unions a wedge into the executive association ranks.

CLEARFIELD BOY

She could picture him crumpling to the ground after a Hun bullet had found lodgment in his flesh. Oh, it would be a comfort to have some one tell her the story; the story of that fierce onslaught of the Americans in Belleau Wood and of her son's part in it. Some one to tell her of the tense moments before the zero hour when the men in the dark green of the Marines went over the top. Some one to tell her of what her son said and what he did before the charge; when he fell and did he send a message to his mother by one of his buddies, a message that had never been received. Her mother heart was aching to hear that story.

Accosted First Marine.

A soldier in the dark green of the Marines was standing in front of the Central Hotel on West Fourth street. He might be able to tell her something. He might have known her son; might have been in his company and regiment. Thousands of soldiers in the city. Oh, it was futile to hope that this Marine standing across the street might be able to comfort her heart, might be able to tell her that story that would appease the ache in her heart.

She went across the street and hesitatingly addressed him. She asked his company, his regiment, and did he know Corporal Russell, Company C, 5th Regiment, Marines?

"God, lady! He was my buddy! He was at my side when he fell, when he died! Are you his mother?"

"Yes, I am his mother." The husky Marine had to take her by the arm to support her. The sudden shock for the moment overcame her.

Then with hundreds of people passing by unmindful of the little tragedy that was being enacted, the Marine told the story to this Gold Star Mother. They stood on the sidewalk in front of the hotel. "Cliff was my Corporal. I was his 'second jack.' We were buddies," the Marine said, and then he told of that great charge of the Americans in Belleau Wood. He told her of the death of his buddy, the son of this mother that stood before him.

"Was there a message?" The words were spoken hardly above a whisper.

No Time For Last Message.

"There was no message. He was at my side when he fell. We went on. God! We had to go on!" the Marine said.

His voice was husky. She was in tears. Finally he finished his story. There was no message for her from her son who had made the supreme sacrifice "over there" for his country, but her heart was comforted. She could visualize the epic charge in Belleau Wood and though tears coursed down her cheeks, her heart must have experienced a thrill of pride that her boy had been one of the bravest of the brave of that irresistible onslaught.

Came From Germantown.

The mother, Mrs. Russell, had come from Germantown, her home, to take part in the convention of the Legion Auxiliary. When she left her home she had not the slightest idea that she would meet a buddy of her son, one who was with him when he fell. She was unable to say what led her to address this one soldier of the thousands in Williamsport and ask him if he knew her boy.

The Marine was Jack Barry, of Clearfield. Before he left her he said, "You watch the parade tomorrow. I will gather a platoon of Marines, and we will march in honor of your son—of my buddy, Corporal Cliff Russell. You will know that we will march in his honor and perhaps you will be the only one in this city who will know. The others will march for another purpose, but we march for Cliff."

Barry was billeted at the Community House on West Fourth street while in the city. When he returned to his Clearfield comrades in the Community House he was in tears. And the tears flowed unrestrainedly when he told his story.

The next day Mrs. Russell watched the parade for the platoon of Marines marching in honor of her boy. File after file, squad after squad passed, but she did not see them.

Neither did she hear the music of the bands, nor the rhythmic tramp of marching feet.

Suddenly however, a thrill shot through her veins as she beheld a platoon of soldiers in the dark green of the Marines, marching with heads erect, in perfect alignment, with perfect rhythm.

And Barry marched at their head! Only that Gold Star Mother and that platoon of Marines knew why they marched—in honor of a soldier sleeping the eternal sleep beneath the plain white cross in the cemetery in France!

IN JAIL ON SERIOUS CHARGE

The "City of Broken Hearts" is in for some more unenviable notoriety. A girl named Welker, on information made before 'Squire John last evening, had John Rader arrested on a charge of felonious rape. Rader was lodged in jail by Constable Reilly.

Last Saturday Roy Welker, brother of the prosecutrix in this case, was arrested and placed in jail on information made by Juvenile Officer Leavy, charging a similar crime against Rader's 9-year-old daughter.

The principals in these affairs live in the little settlement at the upper end of Park avenue, beyond the borough line.

and not only snapped off a front axle but smashed a wheel and otherwise damaged the machine.

The accident occurred about 9 o'clock. Mr. Kline was traveling toward Woodland. Shortly after crossing the Clearfield Creek bridge he saw a Ford in the road ahead of him. The Ford, which was being driven by a foreigner, was wheeling along up the grade and, deciding to pass, Mr. Kline gave the flivver the horn. The driver turned aside as though to let the car past, but just as Mr. Kline came up alongside the fellow switched his flivver back into the road and in order to avoid being side-swiped Kline was forced to turn his car so quickly that he ran into the bank, causing the damage mentioned as the Ford ambled safely away in the distance. None of the occupants of the Kline car suffered more than a strenuous shaking up.

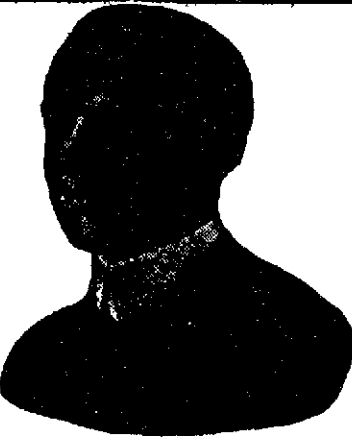

Faulty Steering Gear Causes Wreck

Wes. Lansberry, Jake Rothrock and Milt Goss, of West Side, were victims of an automobile accident which occurred along the Philipsburg-Clearfield State Highway early last evening. They were driving toward Clearfield in Mr. Lansberry's Dodge touring car and when near the school house beyond Woodland something went wrong with the steering gear, the car became unmanageable and leaving the road upset in a field.

The car was badly used up, but the occupants were lucky enough to escape with slight injuries although Mr. Goss received a severe cut above the eyes, which required eleven stitches to close, but Mr. Lansberry's injuries consisted of minor bruises.

Thoughtful motorists ask definitely for "ATLANTIC Medium"

Don't be satisfied with a medium oil that merely looks "medium." Only the highest heat-resisting hydrocarbons of the crude petroleum, selected and assembled by the Atlantic process of refining, can give an oil the character or kind of "body" needed to withstand the incessant attacks of heat, friction and impact developed in an automobile engine. So, ask definitely for and you'll get an oil that not only holds its "body," but that possesses all the fluidity required to reach close-fitting bearings at low as well as high temperatures. Atlantic Medium is a balanced lubricant that can be relied on to meet the wide range of conditions a motor oil encounters.

U. S. SHOULD OWN THEM

Uncle Sam appears to be getting interested in the "own our own home" movement with respect to the buildings he occupies for postoffice purposes throughout the country.

The "Why Pay Rent?" slogan means even more to the uncivilized personage who typifies the government of the United States than to the average renter faced with the problem of gratifying the constantly increasing itching of the landlord's palm, for aside from the fact of the prodigious number of his local domiciles in towns and cities where he handles the people's mail, he has been the particularly juicy prey of the profiteer. The government, in short, is regarded as the easiest kind of an easy mark when it comes to renting property and, moreover, a legitimate victim to be mulcted out of all the conscience of the lessee will stand, if there be any such measure applicable to the landlord-tenant problem.

The profiteering factor aside, the proposition that the government own postoffice buildings is soundly in keeping with the general idea of applying business principles to the conduct of public business, which is by no means the least of the important things to the credit of the present administration to date. It is in line with the budget system, already adopted, with resultant saving of scores of millions of dollars to the taxpayers. At present the annual rent bill for postoffice buildings is $12,000,000. Rentals are being paid on property representing money borrowed at from 7 to 10 per cent interest, whereas the government could build its own postoffice structures on money obtained at 4 per cent, and there would be no taxes, which, in the case of buildings now rented, are added to the price exacted by the investors. Add to the saving that would be affected under normal circumstances the saving through relief from pure extortion, and the wisdom of the government-owned buildings is beyond question.

There is nothing of what might be termed the romantic political interest in a matter of this kind, as there is with regard to the general policy affairs of statecraft with which Congress and a national administration have to deal, but happily the interest of business men in government on business principles is cultivating an appreciation on the part of the entire public which is likely to figure more largely in the political equation in the future than it has in the past.

UTOPIA

A country without an army, a navy, a national debt or an income tax—such is Tonga, last remaining native kingdom of the South Seas.

Every male in Tonga is presented with eight and a quarter acres of land when he reaches the age of sixteen. The treasury has $500,000 surplus, all public improvements have been paid for, and a complete educational system has been set up.

Tonga presents the nearest approach to Utopia on this planet. Although it is a tiny island, greater nations like our own might get some good lessons there.

Switzerland, another little country, is run on a different plan. The Swiss have the best drilled army in the world, they have no need for a navy, as the country is in the center of the troubled Europe. The national sport is shooting and military practice.

Why isn't Switzerland like Tonga? Why does it have the big proportionate army that its taxpayers are forced to support? It is because Tonga is surrounded by the far reaches of the Pacific Ocean, and no other country has been greedy enough yet to grind it with the iron heel. Switzerland has gone through centuries of warfare with all the greedy nations that surround it. It is the victim of geography.

But Tongans and Swiss are alike in this—they mind their own affairs, they are prosperous and they have seen the value of education.

If all the nations of the world would spend the brains and money on education that now go for war plots and rotten diplomacy, the Swiss could throw their guns away, and all the world would be like Tonga.

RUSSIA'S WINTER PROSPECTS

A week or so ago the soviet government announced to the world that Russia's crops would this year be sufficient to supply abundant food to the people of that country. Perhaps this statement may still be taken at its face value; or perhaps it should have been accompanied by a condition. Moscow dispatches state that although the German government is under contract to supply Russia 700 locomotives, it is doubtful if Russia receives them in time to help move the crops. Russia may have food enough provided there is proper distribution of it.

And there is another condition which the statement seems not to have presented. This condition attaches to the government itself, in that its policy has been and still is to take from the producer the major portion of his products. If this policy is still pursued, if the wheat grower is left only 30 bushels in every 100 he raised, and the government is unable to send the 70 bushels it takes to those portions of the country where it is needed, Russia may not have abundant food the coming winter. There may be a vast deal more truth in the Moscow dispatch that "Russia again faces a winter of suffering."

How Aluminum Occurs.

Aluminum is not found in a pure form, but in combination, chiefly as an oxide in the mineral corundum (ruby, sapphire and emery); hydrated oxide in bauxite; phosphate in diaspore; hydrated phosphate in wavellite; hydrous sulphate in combination with potash in alundite and in combination with oxygen and metals as stannates, as in spinel, chrysoberyl and garnet. It also is found as a silicate in various clays. Its chief ore is bauxite.

Why the Moon Is Arid.

The moon is a smaller globe than the earth. Its gravity is only one-sixth of that of ours. As a consequence the atmospheric pressure normal to the moon is far too low to condense water. Steam issuing from a vent remains steam. The internal forces of the steam's molecules are greater than the attractive force of the moon. Steam flows away as it emerged, leaving the moon arid and waterless. —Chicago Tribune.

"Gentlemen of the Guard."

The original function of the household cavalry was to protect the king's person, and Charles II saw to it that his life guards were recruited from old Cavalier families. Even the privates were men of very good families, and were well paid. Their fine uniforms and finer swagger were an essential part of the splendor of Whitehall. They were called "Gentlemen of the Guard."

Beliefs Concerning Lightning.
Continental Europe had, and has, its superstitions regarding lightning. In some parts it is believed that the bird called cross-bill, kept in the house as a pet, is a sure preventive of destruction of the house by lightning or fire. It is said that this power is granted to the bird because it used its peculiarly shaped bill, with the two mandibles curved and crossed over each other to extract the nails from the wounds of Christ impaled on the cross.

Ideals Must Be Put to Use.

It's a fine thing to produce an ideal. It's worse than folly to develop it mentally and let it die there. Ideals to be known must be made tangible. If they remain creatures of our own brains they may help us some, but not much. To be of worth they must become inspirations to others.—Grit.

Maxwell.

VIRGINIA CHOCOLATE SHOP

The $50,000 Operation

By HUBERT RAY

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Breathe away! Breathe away, Mr. Fotheringay."

There was deference even in the voice of the anesthetist, and in the way he deferentially placed the ether cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose, for it was a $50,000 operation, and Mr. Fotheringay was many times a millionaire.

Yes, that was Mr. Fotheringay, that bulky lying unconscious upon the glass-topped table; that bloated bulk of a man, to operate upon whom Professor Openhim had been summoned by special train from Chicago.

The table containing the inanimate form of Professor Openhim's patient was wheeled into the operating theater adjoining. The benches were packed with serious-faced students and many medical men of the city, who had assembled to see something removed from the stomach of Mr. Fotheringay.

Mr. Fotheringay had swallowed a small, hard, round metallic object. So much the X-ray had revealed. There it lay, in Mr. Fotheringay's stomach interfering with the processes of digesting lobster a la Newburg and other viands such as are prepared for men of Mr. Fotheringay's social position.

"How did you come to swallow that?" the surgeon had asked Mr. Fotheringay.

"Must have been biting it," Mr. Fotheringay responded.

The white-robed nurses were grouped in a solid phalanx about the operating table. At least half a dozen of Professor Openhim's assistants were present to assist. One had to hold the forceps, another inserted sponges in the wound that was to be inflicted upon Mr. Fotheringay. Others were simply there to lend prestige to Professor Openhim and to dignify the day—for it was a $50,000 operation.

Mr. Fotheringay was well known in the city, not only as the richest man, but as the biggest skinfint imaginable. He was the sort of man who would foreclose on a widow's mortgage and turn a starving child from his door. Nevertheless, such was the prestige of Mr. Fotheringay that even his incredible meanness vanished into nothingness before the stupendous fact of his wealth.

The surgeon took his scalpel in his hand, and a low sigh of distress went up as he made an incision in the body of Mr. Fotheringay.

It seemed sacrilege. Only a man with nerves so well attuned as Professor Openhim's could have ventured upon the act. Nevertheless, once he had begun he continued just as if Mr. Fotheringay had been an ordinary patient.

Professor Openhim's hand did not tremble in the least. Nor did the anesthetist's fingers shake as he slowly and methodically let the ether drip upon the cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose.

The operation was drawing to an end. Mr. Fotheringay had borne the shock well. He was still unconscious, and he had not stirred from first to last. Only the stertorous breathing had indicated that Mr. Fotheringay's soul still inhabited its earthly tabernacle.

One might have wondered what it was doing while Mr. Fotheringay, looking like a distressingly fat turkey, was being carved. But such speculations are sternly discouraged among physicians and surgeons, especially of Professor Openhim's eminence. The last stitches were drawn and the suturing completed. A horrid thought struck all those about the table simultaneously.

Suppose a sponge or a pair of forceps had been left in Mr. Fotheringay's wound?

They counted the sponges and the forceps eagerly. Nothing had been left behind. And in his hand the operating surgeon held the metal disk that had been taken out of Mr. Fotheringay's body.

Mr. Fotheringay was wheeled out of the operating room, through the anesthetist room into the private room that had been allotted to him. It was the most magnificent private room in the hospital. There lay Mr. Fotheringay in bed, looking a little less fat and turkey-like, and by his bedside sat a nurse, waiting for the moment when Mr. Fotheringay might decide to open his eyes.

Mr. Fotheringay had not opened his eyes, but he was speaking. "Did they find it? Did they find it?" he asked in a weak whisper.

"Yes, yes, Mr. Fotheringay," answered the nurse.

"Mr. Fotheringay stretched out his hand. 'Give it to me,' he muttered. The nurse took the metal disk from the bureau and placed it in Mr. Fotheringay's hand. It was a dime.

Young Solomon, the daring novelist, said at a Coronado tea:

"Youth has strange ideas. I saw a composition that a Los Angeles boy of fourteen wrote the other day on 'The Ages of Man.' The composition ran like this:

"There are three ages of man. One, When we are young we think of the sins we will commit when we grow up. This is the Age of Innocence.

"Two, When we grow up we commit these sins. This is called the Prime of Life.

"Three, When we are old we are sorry we committed them. This is our Dotage."

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS FIRST MEETING

The Woman's Club held the first meeting of the club year Tuesday evening at the recreation building of the textile mill. The Junior Woman's Club members were their guests and there were about forty of each club in attendance. Mrs. Kurtz, the president of the senior organization, conducted a short business meeting and outlined the program for the year and named the various committees and their duties.

The evening's entertainment was in the hands of the three ex-presidents. They started things with an old-fashioned spelling bee, the Juniors versus the Seniors and much to the chagrin of the older women, the young people held their own nobly. The new club song books were put in use for some good singing, then Miss Josephine McMurray gave three very clever readings, accompanied by Mrs. Gallaher on the piano.

The social committee served light refreshments and a very successful meeting came to a satisfying close. The Woman's Club feels deeply indebted to Mr. Geynet for the use of the rooms.

LOCK HAVEN MAN FINDS STOLEN AUTO AT CLEARFIELD

L. A. Undertaker Brown and a man named Harris came to Clearfield this morning, secured the car and drove it home.

NATION'S BANKERS TO MEET IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 13. (United Press)—The 1922 Congress of the American Bankers Association, to be held in New York City, Oct. 3 to 6, is regarded as one of the most important financial sessions of the year.

The peculiar problems due to reconstruction being met by the banking world makes this convention, held in the center of the banking world, the center of interest during the 4-day session.

The convention, which is the forty-eighth annual meeting of the association, will be held at the Hotel Commodore, and it is expected 7,000 representatives of the 22,000 member banks will attend.

The general sessions of the convention will be held in the Grand Ballroom, Commodore Hotel, in the forenoon of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 3, 4 and 5. The sessions of the sections and divisions of the association will be held Monday morning.

Friday, October 6, the closing day, will be a boat trip to West Point, where the cadets give a special parade. At 11:00 a. m. the Executive Council will meet aboard the boat, and in the afternoon, at 4:00 the Administrative Committee will meet on the boat. At 7:00 p. m. will be given the golf dinner.

PRIMARY RESULTS IN MANY STATES; TREND OF VOTERS FAVORS G. O. P.

Results of primary elections held in eight states yesterday were being tabulated today.

Nation-wide attention was being focused on the result of the Massachusetts polling where Henry Cabot Lodge, veteran statesman, was renominated as the Republican candidate for the United States Senate with a plurality of at least 72,000, a three to one lead.

In Michigan Charles Townsend, a friend and supporter of Newberry, was nominated as Republican candidate for the United States Senate.

Another Senator, Miles Poindexter, who voted to seat Newberry, was victorious in the Republican Senatorial primary in Washington.

A surprise was sprung in the Colorado election when William E. Seet, a millionaire, endorsed by labor and non-partisan league voters, won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination by an unexpectedly large majority.

Primaries were also held in South Carolina, Arkansas, Vermont and Louisiana, but these were not viewed by political observers as important from a national point of view.

The Advantages of Matrimony.

"I'm a believer in women getting married. It doesn't matter so much for men, but for women it's the correct thing. Does 'em good and improves their characters. Unless they've a man to be unselfish to and coddle a bit 'they grow selfish themselves.'—From the Great Husband Hunt, by Mabel Barnes Grundy.

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I can't express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 41 S. While an English politician was speaking on taxation he was interrupted by a man shouting: "Are you going to tax my food? Are you going to tax my food?" Some one in the rear of the hall rang out: "Oh, stop your braying; thistles will never be taxed."

The Changeless Record.

"You would rather be photographed than interviewed?" "I'm not so sure about that," answered Senator Sorghum. "If a photograph happens to present you in a disadvantageous attitude there's no chance for you to come out next day with a statement that it has been faked."

She Learned Something.

In the Third Round

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"In the third round, don't forget, kid," Barney had whispered. "Go in for all you're worth, and he'll go easy with you. Then in the third you get it on the jaw and goes down—see?"

Abe nodded. The principals faced each other in the ring. Lofsky, the champion, grinned at Abe and tapped him lightly on the cheek. They sparred and broke away.

Abe was dimly conscious of the vast concourse of spectators. It was the great event toward which he had been working for five years past—his ambition, the welterweight championship. It had been difficult to find a big man willing to meet him. He had fought his way up from the bottom, and he had had tough luck.

And now, at the last, the thing that he had looked forward to so long had become his infamy. Abe had always fought straight. He was the logical man to meet Lofsky. But Lofsky had refused to meet him. And Abe's young wife and the baby were pining in an East Side tenement.

Then temptation had come in the form of Barney. Lofsky would meet him for the purse of nine thousand dollars, if he would take two thousand and a knockout.

Abe had refused scornfully. He knew that he was a fair match against Lofsky. But things at home were going worse, and Minnie was threatened with tuberculosis. In the end Abe yielded.

"It ain't as if it was your finish, kid," Barney had said to him. "Nobody expects you to beat Lofsky, and no one will know. You'll get your chance again some day."

That was the understanding under which they met.

Abe rushed in, pummeling Lofsky barely about the body. Lofsky parried and guarded, returning an occasional blow which lacked all of Lofsky's steam. At first Abe thought Lofsky was mindful of the compact; but then he realized that the big man had not trained for the fight. He was beefy, puffy, with too much stomach over his belt.

And then Abe saw that his chance had come. Lofsky had not trained, and he was trained to the ounce. Victory was within his reach, with seven thousand instead of two as his share of the proceeds.

He could redeem himself and fight fair, as he had always done, in confidence of victory, and so avoid the worst offense known to the prize ring.

On the other hand, if he tricked Lofsky and his manager, would he not be guilty of an offense equally bad?

The dilemma was a hideous one, and there seemed no way to escape dishonor.

And suddenly he saw red. He would beat Lofsky at any rate, if he could. He sprang in and dealt him a blow upon the jaw that staggered him. After that he fought furiously, standing up under a rain of punches. He heard Lofsky grunt, he saw the look of surprise come into his face.

The round ended amid tumultuous applause. Abe hardly heard the whispered advice of his seconds. When the next round began he rushed at Lofsky and began driving him all around the ring. A fearful stomach blow momentarily crippled him; then he had sent out his left, and Lofsky had reeled and fallen.

The spectators were growing frantic. Was this another David? There was an ugly look on Lofsky's face as he rose and met Abe's showering blows. There was a clinch. Then Lofsky got some on Abe's stomach and cheek, two staggering punches that evened things. Abe grew cool. He had been rushing too hard. He guarded for the remainder of the second round.

The third round—the men faced one another. Lofsky was sneering. There was a cut over his eye, and his nose was bleeding. There was a look of uncertainty in his eyes. Abe resolved to put forth all his might in this round, the one in which he was booked to go down. He rushed. He beat down Lofsky's guard. And then—

He opened his eyes. His second was stooping over him, sponging his face.

"What's the matter?" he mumbled.

"Did he get me?"

"Got you in the middle of the round, kid. Gee, an ox couldn't have stood up against a punch like that of Lofsky's. Say, you sure put up a better fight than was expected!"

As he staggered to his corner Lofsky came up and shook hands. "Gee, kid, you certainly had me guessing," he remarked. "I thought for sure you'd double-crossed me, till you let down your guard, or I wouldn't have struck so hard."

Abe smiled. There was a great peace in his heart. He had been beaten fairly—and fate had ordained that he was to keep his pact. He would fight fair in future. And Lofsky would have to meet him again. He must be ready next time for that punch of Lofsky's.

Colorful Reading.

Not long ago, writes a contributor, while my nephew was consulting the librarian at the Fresno city library, a small boy entered with a book that his mother wished exchanged. But, since she had neglected to send a list of books to choose from, the librarian was somewhat at a loss to know what book to send. Finally she asked:

"Has your mother read 'Peckles'?" "No, ma'am," replied the boy; "they're brown."—Youth's Companion.

CURWENSVILLE

The Progress correspondent has been requested by the ladies interested to announce that the "Teen department" of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday schools will hold a food sale at Jimmie's Sweet Shop on Saturday commencing at one o'clock p. m. The proceeds will be applied to the church repairing fund.

Miss Staak, representing the Swarthmore people, has been in town several days week trying to interest Curwensville people in assembling a three day session of a winter Chautauqua. She has met with some encouragement in her quest. From an educational standpoint it represents the best, and we believe the people would be vastly benefited to have it come for a few days at least.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Cowher, of Patton, spent a day or two in town departing for their home on Tuesday, being accompanied by Mrs. C. L. Frank.

Lex Caldwell has purchased a dwelling house on Susquehanna avenue from Mrs. Lash. The Caldwell family only arrived in Curwensville a week ago from Illinois.

We have been requested to announce that a Harvest Home and Old Folks service will be held in the M. E. church next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. M. J. Runyan, of Wallacetown, will be the speaker. Gifts of vegetables, canned fruit, jellies, etc will be thankfully received and donated to the Old Folks Home at Tyrone.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Day Kirk, of Pittsburgh, are visiting Mr. Kirk's mother Mrs. A. M. Kirk. It pleases us to announce that Day is one of Curwensville's boys that has made good in the financial world. He is now vice-president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad and Coal Company. During the strike this company had no trouble whatever with their employees and all seemed happy and pleased with their treatment and work.

From a paper published in the city of Bogalusa, Louisiana, we glean the information that two former Pike township boys are making their mark in the world and that both are men of affluence in their adopted home. We refer to E. R. Cassidy, who last week was nominated as one of the three members of a Commission council on the Democratic ticket, receiving a larger majority than the other two nominees. W. H. Cassidy, a brother, was chosen as a member of the State Highway Department, his duty being to pass on new roads asked for by the people residing in his and adjoining Parishes, as townships in that State are called. Both of these men are sons of John Cassidy, who was a well known lumberman in this and other counties.

Mrs. Pennyacker, mother of Mrs. Curtin, was reported last evening as being quite ill at the home of her daughter.

Raymond Wingert, of the South Side, leaves today for Yardley, New Jersey. He is taking an automobile that was used by Neff, a former foreman at the stone siding, back to its owner, Chas. Eastburn.

Health Officer Weaver posted a typhoid fever card on the premises occupied by James Lamb, Grampian road. There is one other case of fever on South Side of Anderson Creek above the upper bridge, these being the only two cases of contagious diseases in the borough at present.

John Broome and family, who have been residing at Millersburg, Pa., for the past four or five years, will move to Clearfield to make their home. Mr. Broome being transferred to that point. Their daughter, Helen, is a student at Indiana Normal school.

The employees at Summit sole leather tannery received a raise of a trifle over ten per cent. in wages the same to date from September 1st. There was no jumping up and down on the scale of the raise, but every man and raise increased equally, therefore they had no kick coming on the ground that one man received more than another.

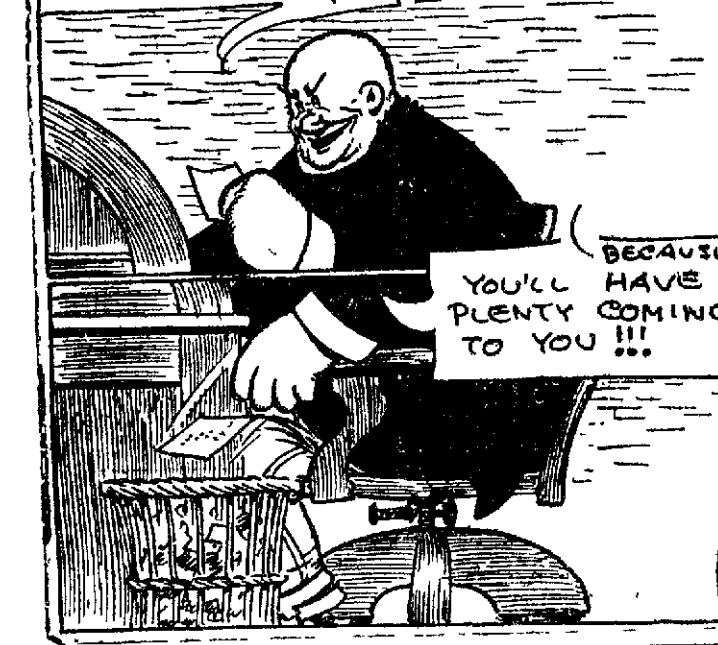

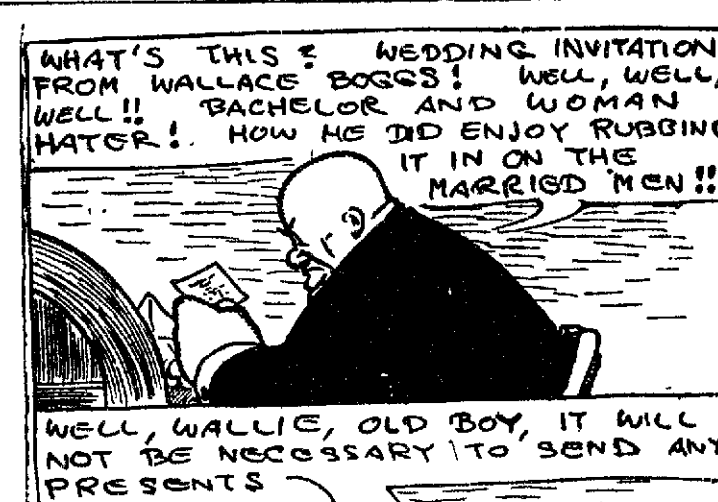

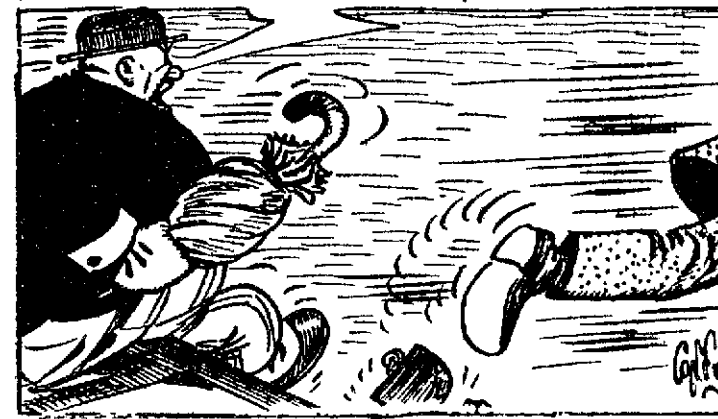

Mrs. Sterley Garrison, who lives in Trenton, New Jersey, accompanied by a young daughter, is visiting in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs.

Many Needed to Save State. To be a voice outside the state speaking to mankind or to the future perhaps shaking the actual state to pieces in doing so, one man will suffice. But to reform the state in order to save it, to preserve it by changing it, a body of workers is needed as well as a leader—a considerable body of workers, placed at many points, and operating in many directions.—Matthew Arnold.

PENNA. THE HOSTESS
STATE FOR W. C. T.
U. CONVENTION

The Convention City for 1922 for the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is the city of Williamsport. The meeting of the organization this year makes the third time in the history of the organization that Williamsport has been the hostess city. The convention will meet in the First Presbyterian church, September 29 to October 3. Williamsport is an industrial city of about 50,000 population, having about 80 manufacturing firms in its midst. Its location gives it a plentiful supply of good mountain water, and is considered the most healthful city in Pennsylvania, and the fourth in rank in the United States. This fact alone makes it a suitable place for such a gathering.

A program has been arranged which will be full of interest, containing many subjects vital to the welfare of our beloved state. Prominent speakers of State, National and World fame, will take part in this Convention, among whom will be Dr. Caroline Geisel, Little Creek Sanitarium, Hon. Clyde Kelly of United States Congress, Anna Adams Gordon, the National President of the organization and others. One evening of the Convention will be given over to the gubernatorial candidates, when William Repp, Prohibition candidate, Gifford Pinchot, Republican and John A. McSparran the Democratic candidate, will be present. There will be many other interesting parts on the program. The Convention session will be presided over by Mrs. Ella M. George of Beaver Falls, the State President of the organization.

Following the State Convention, will take place the meeting of the World's Organization in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, November 11 to 16, and the National Convention in the same city, November 17 to 19. Great preparations have been made by the hostess state for the entertainment of these two big Conventions.

Bird Builds Fancy Bungalow.

The power bird of Australia builds a very elaborate nest which resembles a bungalow. When this is finished the bird proceeds to decorate it with flowers and other objects of bright colors. Any other bird which undertakes to interfere with the decorations is in for a good thrashing, for the power bird objects to any criticism of its work.

Man Too Richly Endowed.

Man's happiness, as I construe, comes of his greatness; it is because there is an infinite in him, which, with all his cunning, he cannot quite bury under the finite.—Carlyle.

Is It Brings Bride Luck.

A romantic superstition has earned for Norfolk Island, in the Pacific ocean, the nickname of "Honey-moon Island." It is believed that a bride who spends her first month of married life there will be assured of long life, health, wealth and happiness.

The Frugal Chinese.

The Chinese, says W. Cameron Forbes in his book, "The Romance of Business," have reduced thrift to an exact science. With the individual Chinese it is, he asserts, a question of either "save or starve," hence he has become "the most frugal and the least wasteful man on earth."

Pearls Long Imitated.

The imitation of pearls is not a new industry, but was carried on centuries ago. In the inventory of the jewels of a French lady of high degree in 1731 there is named "un collier de perles fausses," a necklace of false pearls, but more than a century earlier pearls were made in France by a jeweler named Jaquin, and so successful was his manufacture, it was said the finer ones were bought up by the dealers of Asia and became rare in France.

Size of the City.

Although its shape is irregular, the city of New York is approximately 35 miles long and 17 miles wide.

"I knew him when he was a boy"

What one is there of us that has not felt the glow of satisfaction over the outstanding success of a life-long friend! Often a surprise—seemingly "all of a sudden." Yet neither surprising nor sudden, when you stop to think back over each step of his progress.

THE United States Rubber Company—makers of U. S. Royal Cord—were first to conceive, make and announce the balanced tire. A tire in which there is such complete unity of action in tread and carcass that neither will give way before the other.

First to conceive, make and announce a complete line of tires—a tire for every need of price and use under one standard of quality.

First to tell the public about the good and bad in tire-retailing. (You remember the phrase "Go to a legitimate dealer and get a legitimate tire.")

First also to arouse industrial and trade minds to the need of a new kind of tire competition. (Competition for better and better values. Greater and greater public confidence.)

THESE high spots along the U. S. Road to leadership indicate the intent—the will to win by the quality route in a price market.

Now that so many car-owners have given their verdict for quality tires in general, and U. S. tires in particular—a number of dealers and car-owners whose vision has been clouded by "discounts," "sales" and what not, are beginning to remember that they "knew him when he was a boy."

Justice Must Be Foundation.

In the government of men a great deal may be done by severity, more by love, but most of all by clear discernment and impartial justice, which pays no respect to persons.—Goethe.

Eucalyptus Has Advantage.

It requires more than a century for a cedar tree to grow large enough to yield a 30-foot telephone pole. The eucalyptus will attain a larger growth in 30 years, and its wood is quite as durable.
